Epsilon Chapter of Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity Celebrates its Academic Success at Annual Scholarship Banquet: Awards Total $56,000+

Ames, IA - The Epsilon chapter of Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity awarded a record-breaking $56,300 in scholarships to their members this Sunday. In total, 49 members of the fraternity were awarded 79 different awards. This unparalleled scholarship fund is the capstone for what has been a fantastic academic year for the men of Epsilon chapter.

Just over a week ago, the Interfraternity Council recognized Epsilon chapter's efforts by recognizing them with the best academic programming award for 2017. This award is given to the Interfraternity Council fraternity chapter that best exemplifies the Greek community's value of scholarship.

In the last school year, the chapter has boasted the fantastic grade point averages of 3.30 and 3.14 on a four point scale, earning them second and eighth place rankings on the Interfraternity Council's biannual grade report. This is in part due to the 37 brothers that received Dean's list honors last semester.

In addition to their great academic achievements, a significant portion of the chapter holds membership in academic clubs and honorary societies. These societies range from engineering societies, like Sigma Gamma Tau, to All-Greek honoraries, like the Order of the Omega, in addition to the University Honors Program. Topping off this list are the proud four members that were accepted into Iowa State's Cardinal Key society this year; the most prestigious academic honorary at Iowa State University.

Epsilon chapter wishes its brothers the best of luck as many conduct research, enter the workforce, or even continue into graduate studies in the coming months. Epsilon Tekes will be present in companies such as Epic, Microsoft, Facebook, and programs within the Carlson School of Management.
